An Inherent Right.

From the Centralia Courier.

A Boone county farmer has been guilty of the most atrocious and unwarranted cruelty in firing a load of bird shot into the corporal system of a neighbor's son. The boy was stooping over to thump a watermelon at the time when the leaden shot tore through his trousers seat in a very sudden and painful manner. It was the shot and not the suddenness which hurt, however. The boy is nursing his injured feelings, but the farmer is suffering pangs of conscience which could not be loaded into an old blunderbuss one at a time. The boy's wounds will heal, but the other's never. The latter has robbed a young life of one of its sweetest pleasures. Take away from a boy the right to thump a watermelon upon ever occasion that it is exposed to his view, to hear in answer to his knock the soft, mellow invitation to enter, and there is very little left. It is just as much the inalienable right of a boy to thump on a melon as to touch a newly painted door. The inference that he is to carry it off is about as correctly made in either case. The farmer was wrong, entirely wrong, but it is to be hoped that the lesson his conscience has taught him will forever prevent any other interference with the holy communion which nature has established between the average boy and August watermelon.

Young Barefoot.

As to the healthiness of going without shoes or stockings there can be no question. Some of the healthiest children of the world are to be found in the Scottish highlands, where shoes are seldom worn at an earlier age than 12 or 13. The negro and coolie laborers, who work barefooted, are usually in robust health. Brown, in the "History of Man," tells of an African monarch who suffered from what appeared to have been a cold in his head, besides other ailments, while his people were always as well as possible. Can it be that the reason was that, by the laws of his kingdom, he alone was permitted to clothe his feet, and that he gratified his vanity by always wearing gorgeous sandals? It is probably generalizing too much to state that the barefooted races are the healthiest. But it is certain that barefoot are healthier than badly shod feet. In our English villages children are constantly sent to school in wet weather with holes in their shoes. They sit for hours with damp feet and illnesses are the result. If their parents would send them off barefooted, as is done in Scotland and Ireland, their feet would dry by evaporation, in a short time, and it would be found that no harm followed.—Ex.

For a lame back or for a pain in the side or chest, try saturating a piece of flannel with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and binding it over the affected parts. This treatment will cure any ordinary case in one or two days. Pain balm also cures rheumatism. 50 cent bottles for sale by all druggists.

Settling a Great Problem.

St. Louis Republic
Since time out of mind college freshmen have been troubled with the question of the result when a projectile moving with irresistible force strikes an impenetrable body. It is in a fair way to be solved now, and fortunately to be solved rightly. It is in every way to the advantage of the world and of civilization in the world that the projectile should keep moving, and it is altogether probable that this is what will happen.

This conclusion seems to be justified by the trial of a new gun at Sandy Hook during the week. If the results there reported are borne out by future tests, the ironclad, with its impenetrable plates of chilled steel, is a thing of the past, already useless and out of date.

The 9-inch nickel-steel plate is the heaviest that can be used. There is a definite limit to the thickness of armor plate, for the armored ship must be kept afloat and manageable, and the armor plates now in use are almost, if not quite, as heavy as can be carried without either making the ship unmanageable or sinking it. Yet the new gun cuts through these plates as if they were paper.

Only two shots were fired from an 8-inch Holtzer gun. The target was nine inches of nickel steel armor plate attached to three feet of solid oak, supported against a sand pile. Both shots cut smoothly through the steel and the oak, the projectiles burying themselves far into the sand. When dug out it was found that they were not even dented.

Of course there must be further evidence before final conclusions are reached in the case of this particular gun, but the ultimate result is hardly doubtful. With equal ardor men are attempting to make impenetrable armor and to invent guns no armor can resist. For naval armor plate the limitations are already clearly visible. It cannot exceed a certain thickness, while there is no apparent limit to the possibilities of increasing the force of projectiles. All science is on the side of the projectile, for all science is continually developing new forces, or rather new means of controlling and using force. And to this there is no imaginable limit.

If we have a gun that will cut through nine inches of steel and three feet of oak as easily as a pistol ball goes through a piece of pasteboard, the best ironclad afloat can be shot to pieces and sunk with no trouble at all.

Perhaps we have not reached that desirable consummation just yet, but it is certain to come. If this test is reliable, it has come already to such an extent that natives must soon mean mere harbor defense vessels, or at the utmost fast cruisers in making which the end sought will be speed sufficient to keep out of the range of any pursuing vessel carrying effective guns.

Gospel Truth.

Christian Advertisers.

So called labor riots took place during the week in New York, Chicago and Buffalo, the trouble in each case being caused by foreign labor agitators or Anarchists. In New York the chief speaker of these people is a woman of notoriously bad reputation who has managed, in some mysterious way, to obtain a considerable influence over the mob of foreigners who have been threatening trouble. During one of her speeches she said: "We want bread. We want clothes. If necessary we will break into the stores and take them by force. Working men, listen to my voice. If the police oppose us we will kill them! Meet clubs and bullets with knives and stones and bats also. Be not afraid of death. Something must be done to relieve your misery. If the men do not march in the first rank they will find the women there, the wives of the working men who are starving at home; they will teach you how to march and fight, if need be, under the black flag." Some idea of the misery these so-called sufferers are enduring may be gained from the statement that while the speech was going on four bar-keepers were kept busy in drawing beer for the crowd, and when the meeting was ended, so great was the demand for refreshment, they were forced to send out and get two more men to help distribute liquors over the bar. The saloon-keeper said the day was one of the best he ever knew. He took in nearly $1,000 from the starving crowd. There is no doubt much real suffering among the laboring people of the city, but the districts who find themselves suddenly thrown out of work, but the cause of charity will undoubtedly suffer from such meetings and speeches as have just been described. It is not believed that in any case trouble has been made by American working men out of employ, but that the foreign agitators have used the occasion to promote their own purposes.

Good Night.

From Harper's Bazar.

There is a tender sweetness about our common phrases of affectionate greeting, simple and unobtrusive as they are, which falls like dew on the heart. Good night! the little one says it as, gowned in white, with shining face and hands, and prayers said, she toddles off to bed. Sisters and brothers exchange the wish; parents and children; friend and friends, familiar use has robbed it of its significance to some of us; we repeat it automatically without much thought. But consider. We are voyagers, putting off from time to time upon an unexplored sea. Our barks of life set sail and go onward into the darkness and we, asleep on our pillows, take no such care as we do when awake and journeying by daylight. Of the perils of the night, whatever they may be, we take no heed. Amusement, vigilance watches over us, but is like the vigilance of one stronger and wiser than we, who is the eternal good. Good and God spring from the same root, and the same in meaning. "Good-by" is only "God be with you." "Good night" is really "Godnight" or "God guard the night." It would be a cheerful household in which these gentle forms of speech were ignored or did not exist. Alas, the happy and the sorrowful, day by day, may say "Good night."

MONEY TO YOU

To My Subscribers:—

A comparison of the COURIER with other esteemed contemporaries in Chariton county will convince you that as a newspaper the COURIER hasn't a superior and perhaps not an equal in this county.

I am proud of the COURIER and I believe justly so.

It is my earnest desire to extend my circulation to double its present size, and this I can do if my patrons will help me.

The only trouble I find in placing the COURIER in almost every household in Chariton county is that the subscription price is $1.50 a year.

In order to overcome this obstacle I make this proposition to my subscribers:

Each subscriber who will get me one or more new subscribers at $1 a year, I will send the COURIER to for $1 instead of $1.50.

The more subscribers you get, the merrier—for the editor. Each subscriber who will send me five or more new subscribers I will send the COURIER to for one year FREE.

The COURIER is an all home-print, 6-column, 8-page paper and I cannot afford to furnish it at $1 unless I can largely increase my present circulation.

In case your subscription does not expire for some months, by sending in the name of one new subscriber accompanied by $1 in cash you will get the benefit of the $1 rate.

Of course all who do not avail themselves of this liberal offer will be expected to pay $1.50 a year.

It remains entirely with you as to whether you pay $1 or $1.50 a year for the COURIER. A great many of my patrons are even glad to get the COURIER and pay $1.50, but by doubling my circulation I can afford to send it for $1 a year, and make just as much money as I do now at $1.50.

Will you help me to increase my circulation, and by so doing save money for yourself?

Very truly yours,
C. P. VANDIVER,
Editor and Publisher of the COURIER.
